TV series shows real world is a positive place BYU-TV airs

By LAURA ELLERTSON Universe Staff Writer

In an age when many television programs include material of questionable nature, "Center Street" provides clean, positive entertainment for teenagers and families.

A news release from The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints described "Center Street" as "a halfhour television news magazine geared toward youth produced by the public affairs department of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.'

The target audience of the show is ages 12 to 22.

'The goal of the show is to put something positive on TV for teens," said Tracy Wilson, one host of "Center Street." Wilson said everything is positive and based on gospel standards. She said the show attempts to promote good living as well as show the good things teenagers are

The show, which is wholly sponsored by the church, focuses on families and encourages teenagers to serve others. Each show ends with a signature remark about choosing the right in all situations.

"We always knew we wanted to go after the teenage viewer," said Don Russell, who handles media marketing in the public affairs department of the church. The show began about six years ago and was originally called 'Young Times.'

Ron Johnson, assistant producer of "Center Street," said the show hopes to build friendships between different faiths and different people.

There is a toll-free hotline number for "Center Street" viewers to call. Viewers can call this number to make comments, suggestions, or to request free Mormonad posters.

After each show airs somewhere, an average of 40 to 100 calls come in on the toll-free number. One call came in from a girl who said the show saved her brother's life. He had been contemplating suicide and the positive things emphasized in the program helped him realize there are many good things in life.

Wilson said the group tries to focus on topics teens want to hear about. Such topics have included family communications, sexual abstinence and dating ideas.

All of the stories on "Center Street" are based on true events.

Topic ideas are generated from calls received on the toll-free hotline as well as from newspapers such as "The Daily Universe.' Each episode has to pass through the correlation committee of the church. Wilson remembers having to re-shoot an episode because church representatives didn't like some of the camera angles. Gary Esterholdt, producer of "Center Street," said the church plans to have 26 episodes translated into Spanish this year. Each show airs for just 30 minutes,

LDS recording artists strive to reflect Christian values

GIVE A LISTEN: The BYU Bookstore displays some of its newest and most popular LDS music titles. LDS music continues to be among the best selling music in the bookstore.

By DREW LINGINFELTER

Senior Reporter

When the BYU Bookstore music department wanted to start a special promotion featuring the top 10 selling albums at the bookstore, it didn't realize how far down the list it would have to go to get past religious titles

Laura Allen, a music department employee at the bookstore, said the top 100 selling albums are all LDS music titles.

Why is LDS music so popular?

The answer probably lies in the fact that it makes people feel good. And that is what the artists want to accomplish

Earl Madsen, an audio production specialist at Deseret Book in charge of developing new audio products, said Deseret Book artists want to create "good music with good values."

"They have a goal of producing things in harmony with the church. We want to produce good music that is fun and in support of certain values and principles," he said.

The mission of Deseret Book, which is a wholly-owned subsidiary of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, is to further the mission of the church through products that will uplift people and make them better.

Deseret Book, one of the largest distributors of LDS popular music, works like any other record company, Madsen said.

"Our artists are paid royalties but there are expenses related to marketing and production that must be covered," he said.

When looking to produce an album, Madsen said he works with the artists to find a studio that will best work for the artist and the type of

The studios they use vary with the artist. "We go into the marketplace and contract with the studios that best meets the artist's needs,"

Madsen said. "There are a lot of excellent studios here in Utah and a lot of excellent engineers who put the music together."

One studio that has contributed greatly to LDS popular music is Pinnacle Studios, a division of the Pinnacle Group that also owns the Tuacahn Theater in St. George.

Don Sterling, Pinnacle Group's senior vice president, said the studios are holding their own. He said the studios were established to provide another forum in which Utah artists could produce their work.

"We wanted more opportunity to get Utah artists recorded so they could get their songs out to as many people as possible," Sterling said.

"The industry here in Utah is competitive because there are a lot of good studios and we have to work to keep an edge," he continued. 'We've got to be price sensitive and we've got Sterling said most music produced at Pinnacle Studios would be well received by an audience of church members.

"With the music we produce here we try to make it inclusive not exclusive," Sterling said. "That is probably the majority of the projects we

'We just finished the Celebrating Utah project and the Kurt Bestor Christmas album," he said. Although not marketed exclusively to the LDS market, Sterling admits most copies are sold to members of the LDS church. "Kurt Bestor would tell you he is an artist who happens to be LDS, rather than an artist who's skewed to an LDS audience," Sterling said. LDS popular music not only sells well on the shelf, but on the air as well. The Deseret News reported that religion on the radio is alive and well in Utah with eight stations between Ogden and Provo playing religiousonly programming.

With over 26 million households nationwide receiving the Faith & Values Channel, The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has the potential of delivering to these people hours of wholesome, family-based

Disabled chess player saved through internet

BOSTON — A disabled man who became ill while logged on to an Internet chess site reached out to fellow players from around the world for emergency

Charles Drafts, a double amputee who types using a stick in his mouth, was playing chess in cyberspace Saturday on the multi-use World Wide Web site where 159 others also were logged on.

Suddenly, he sent out this message: "I'm having physical illness problems

"He was starting to have some really bad feelings, shortness of breath and dizziness, and he typed in a message to all our members," said Daniel Sleator, a computer science professor at Carnegie Mellon University near Pittsburgh who founded the Internet Chess Club.

"It took a little while to know whether it was serious or not because there's an awful lot of kidding and bantering that goes on," Sleator said. "At first, I think some people were thinking it was a joke. But others realized was a serious thing and started getting the information right away."

Drafts managed to type in his address and a short while later Boston firefighters broke down his door to get inside. They rushed the 48-year-old man to Beth Israel Hospital, where he was listed in stable condition on Sunday, suffering from an undisclosed ailment.

Regional colleges undergoing construction

SALT LAKE CITY — A building boom has hit Utah's colleges and universities despite decreasing support for "bricks and mortar" from the Utah Legislature and governor.

In fact, at least $250 million worth of projects are in various stages of construction at state institutions.

During the 1996 legislative session, lawmakers appropriated about $32 million for capital facilities on campuses. The difference was funded in previous years and "in phases over a number of years," said Don A. Carpenter, higher education associate commissioner for planning and facilities.

The projects are being paid through legislative support, fund-raising campaigns, bond issues and substantial private donations, Carpenter said.

Some of the projects include:

University of Utah's $34 million library expansion, which was financed over three years and will be dedicated Wednesday. The event will end two years of construction.

At Utah State University, work is continuing this fall on the reconstruction of Old Main, which was severely damaged by fire in 1983. The third and final phase of the work will cost $8.3 million and be finished by this time next year, said USU spokesman Lee Roderick.

Utah Valley State College students, staff and visitors are coping with traffic detours caused by the reconstruction of the school's main access road. The first phase of the $3.4 million project will be completed in November, with additional work slated to begin next spring.

Parks bill passes in House; Utah affected

WASHINGTON — The House passed a scaled-back federal parks bill affecting 41 states late Saturday after discarding dozens of provisions that had stalled the legislation because of White House opposition.

The bill, which was approved 404-4, now goes to the Senate where its fate is unclear as Congress prepares to adjourn. It calls for scores of land exchanges, boundary changes and new designations of historic sights, scenic rivers and memorials, most of them noncontroversial.

The measure included some version of a land exchange between the Forest Service and Snowbasin Ski Resort in Utah, the site of the downhill competition in the 2002 Winter Games.

Snowbasin wanted 1,320 acres of Forest Service land at the base of the resort for 4,100 acres owned by Snowbasin owner Earl Holding elsewhere in the sur-

Holding has said the land exchange was critical for the Olympics, but critics, including some in the administration, were bothered that he intended to build a multi-million dollar four-season resort on much of the exchanged property.

House approval of the bill came after lawmakers scrambled most of the day to craft a stripped-down compromise that would be acceptable to the administration. The White House had said an earlier version would be vetoed by the

The Senate is expected to take up the bill on Monday in one of the last votes of the 104th Congress before lawmakers adjourn to campaign for re-election.

Accused bombers push for separate trials

DENVER — Timothy McVeigh and Terry Nichols, who forged a friendship on a shared distrust of the government, return to court this week as enemies blaming each other for the Oklahoma City bombing.

McVeigh's attorneys argue Nichols was the primary figure behind the bombing that killed 168 people and that McVeigh ingenuously trusted him. Nichols' attorneys say McVeigh's "violent extremism" appalled Nichols.

They hope to convince a judge that they should be tried separately, arguing that jurors will be unable to distinguish between the evidence admitted against each man and fairly judge them individually.

"The cases against Mr. McVeigh and Mr. Nichols differ dramatically in every relevant respect: the quantity and quality of the evidence against each, the degree of culpability for the crime demonstrated, and the character of each defendant for sentencing purposes," said Nichols' attorney, Michael Tigar.

Prosecutors will push for a joint trial at the hearing that begins Wednesday, arguing that most evidence will be used against both defendants and that jurors will be able to sort it out. They also believe a joint trial will be more economical and less traumatic for bombing survivors and victims' families.

Many of the stories are filmed on location outside of Utah to make the show which airs internationally look like it isn't a local show.

Cole said that in order to draw away from the negative stereotype as a religious station, the channel and its board of directors changed the stations name Sunday to Odyssey. Cole said the new name will impel others to watch and insure the continued growth of the channel by making it attractive to the broadest audience possible.

"The Faith & Values Channel is very influential in many communities. We can do better, we know we can," Cole said. "We are very optimistic. New, beautiful things are happening for the new year.'

Clinton spoke by telephone for about 10 minutes each Sunday afternoon with Arafat, Netanyahu Mubarak and Hussein. White House spokesman Mike McCurry said Clinton particularly wanted to thank Netanyahu and Arafat for accepting his invitation and to "encourage them to come to Washington in a frame of mind that allows progress to be made.

Palestinians were that hoping

Mubarak would attend. "Egypt's role is important, and we don't like to think of being there without President Mubarak," Nabil Shaath, the Palestinian minister of planning, said on CBS' "Face the Nation."

Mubarak tentatively sent word of a scheduling conflict. But his foreign minister, Amr Moussa, said on U.S. television that a Mubarak no-show could be blamed on Israeli behavior in recent weeks.

Mubarak is annoyed that the situation in Israel "reached that level of insensitivity to the Arab people and the Arab feelings," Moussa said, also

"President Mubarak is definitely upset at the negative developments that have occurred and that the peace process, as it is, is really teetering. It is not in good shape at all," Moussa

The Washington meeting, tentatively scheduled for Tuesday, will focus on "relevant issues here to the recent violence," Clinton told reporters in the White House's Rose Garden.

He did not say whether the issues included reopening Sunday of an 500yard-long archaeological tunnel that runs near religious sites sacred to both Muslims and Jews.

Upgrades on the passage were completed last week, and that triggered a Palestinian reaction that fed the most violent battles between Israelis and Arabs since the 1967 Middle East

The United States has implied criticism of the original opening of the tunnel, but Clinton avoided mention of it Sunday. As he turned to leave the Rose Garden on Sunday, Clinton ignored a reporter's question on Israel's decision to reopen

Clinton said the violence is a shocking development, considering the "giant steps toward peace" that the region has taken in recent years.

"There has been some progress towards ending the confrontation, but not enough," Clinton said. "It is our responsibility to do whatever we can to protect the peace process and move it forward. This is such a moment."

Chief Palestinian negotiator Saeb Erekat said Sunday that Israel should close the tunnel to show its commitment to restoring peace.

"We get a continuation of surprises by Mr. Netanyahu," Erekat said. "The reopening of the tunnel this morning, the siege of towns. He's putting tanks in front of each village and refugee camp. It seems to me that he's calling for more violence.

Eliahu Ben-Elissar, Israel's ambassador to the United States, said Arafat is using the tunnel issue as a screen for his real purpose, to undermine

"It's as if somebody was looking for some reason, for some excuse in order to launch this violence, because somebody maybe still believes violence can be used as a political tool," he told NBC's "Meet the Press."

IN THE MIDDLE: BYU's Jerusalem Center sits between Palestinian and Israeli sections of Jerusalem. Amid recent violent upheavals in the city, some have expressed concern for student safety though the center is considered "The Switzerland of East Jerusalem"

YU's Jerusalem Center an oasis amid violence

By JENNIFER DYER Universe Staff Writer

As riots and protests erupt in Jerusalem and throughout the West Bank, the one place that remains peaceful is BYU's Jerusalem Center for Near Eastern Studies.

The Center is considered to be 'The Switzerland of East Jerusalem.' said Ray Linford. Linford and his wife are a service couple at the Jerusalem Center.

However, last Thursday, a small riot broke out just below the south gate to the Jerusalem Center. Palestinians from the nearby village blocked the street with burning trash bins and tires. They also set fire to a car, Linford said.

"Within 30 minutes, relative quiet had been restored with only occasional shouting heard. During the entire time, only one shot was fired," Linford said.

Another protest broke out Friday in the same area! "This time they brought in a whole bus load of police and Israeli Defense Force. They walked through the village and cleared (the protesters) out," Linford

The Jerusalem Center is taking every precaution to ensure the safety of its students Linford said. Currently, students are not allowed to go into the Old City or into East Jerusalem.

They are allowed to walk only to nearby Hebrew University or travel by taxi to West Jerusalem, the Jewish section of the city.

The recent violence in Jerusalem was triggered by the completion of a tunnel bordering the Holy Mount. The Holy Mount, which is home to the Dome of the Rock and Al Aqsa mosque, is considered by Muslims to be their third most holy religious site. Jews consider the Holy Mount to be the site of Herod's temple. The tunnel does not go underneath the Holy Mount but Palestinian officials view its completion as a challenge of their claims to the holy site and say that it endangers the foundation of the mosque. 'The Center does an exceptional job of keeping us safe and aware of where we should and should not go," said Marisa Rasmussen, a student at the Jerusalem Center.

"One of our security guards is a colonel for the Israeli military intelligence reserves and he has friends in good places to give him reports about what is happening. He gets daily on up to hourly security reports from them to advise us on what we need to do," Linford said.

'The feeling in the Center is a terrible feeling of sadness. We are sad," Linford said.

Students at the Jerusalem Center agreed that the recent turmoil has United States. "Living here really opens your eyes to the importance of freedom and the many freedoms we take for granted in the United States," said Mindy Nelson, a student at the Jerusalem Center.

Millions of women around the world gathered together Saturday evening for the General Relief Society meeting to hear inspiring messages of faith, hope and charity.

President James E. Faust, Second Counselor in the First Presidency of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latterday Saints, thanked Relief Society women for their faith and devotion and expressed the need for women to use their divine gifts to nurture others.

He told of his grandmother who served as a ward Relief Society president for 33 years and testified that his wife's activity in Relief Society helped things run smoother in their home. He encouraged sisters to give needed advice and input in ward and stake counsels. "Let your meekness and love of purity be felt; men are not so endowed with these gifts.'

Lisa Bolin Hawkins, a part-time teacher at the BYU Law School, was co-awarded "The Arlene R. and William P. Lewis Playwrighting Contest For Women," together with Jeanne Murray Walker, a professor at the University of Delaware.

"I am thrilled to be awarded this prize. I have been writing verses since I was four years old, but finally I can think of myself as a writer. This prize is a real encouragement; it is like someone is telling you that ... yes, you wrote a good play, you can do it again," Hawkins said.

The jury, which was composed of BYU faculty members and local playwrights, stated that both plays were equally outstanding, said S. Danae Friel, administrative assistant of the BYU Theater and Film Department. There were participants from all over Hawkins received the prize, $600 divided between the two winners, at a symposium arranged by the BYU Theater and Film Department on Sept. 19. Tim Slover, administrator of the contest, gave Hawkins her prize.

Hawkins' play will be performed as a platform reading some time during Winter Semester, Friel said.

Hawkins' play is called "One of the Righteous" and is about a 18-yearold Jewish boy who moves out because of a religious leader, Rebbe Mach, who one day shows up at his widowed mother's door. Rebbe Mach tells him that it is his destiny to become a religious leader. If the boy goes with this religious leader, he will be able to live his religion better.

Rebbe Mach is a Hasidic Jew. This particular orthodox group believes that there are 36 righteous men living on the earth at all times, and that the world exists upon these men's merits. Rebbe Mach is one of them.

The boy is being dragged between his mother and the Rebbe. However, he is flattered because he is chosen by the Rebbe, and the Rebbe helps him answer the question about who he Hawkins got the idea for the story of the play when she heard about the legend of the 36 righteous men.

The story is not autobiographical but there are parallels to my own life, because it is like someone would show up on my door and claim they

COUGAR SANDWICH: Cougar linebackers Shay Muirbrook (left) Brad Martin squeeze the football out of a Southern Methodist running back in a 31-3 BYU win Saturday at Cougar Stadium. The BYU defense was the big story, setting the tone of the game early on and keeping a high-powered Mustang powered offense in check all day long. With the win BYÚ improved its overall record to 4-1 and its Mountain Division to 2-0. The Cougars travel to Logan this Friday to take on the Utah State Aggies.

Morgan said a key to the success of the defense was its ability to disrupt SMU quarterback Ramon Flanigan. "We came out this week and played a ton of man so we could get some pressure on him by blitzing, and it paid off," he said. "It's great when we play like this, I love it!"

Flanigan finished the game with 16 yards on 17 rushing attempts and 127 yards on 9 of 23 passing. He was sacked four times for -32 yards.

After the defense stopped the Mustangs, the Cougar offense wasted no time in taking control. The offense executed well and dominated SMU's defense in the first half, enabling it to score 31 points. BYU had six possessions on offense in the first half and scored on five of them, including four touchdowns and one field-goal. The only possession they did not score on ended with a fumble. Edwards called the first-half effort "the best we've played this year."

Running back Brian McKenzie said the difference on offense this game from the past two was a result of being more focused. "We wanted to go out and dominate from the start, and we did," he said.

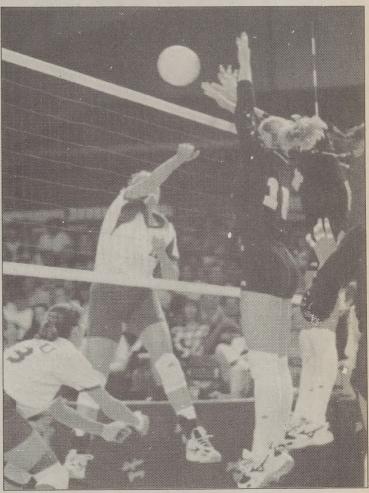

"Everybody was serious, everybody came out to play. We meant business today."

BYU's offense was balanced in the first-half, attempting 18 passes and rushing the ball 16 times. The passing game was directed by the arm of quarterback Steve Sarkisian. He threw for 272 yards and a touchdown while completing 14 passes. K.O. Kealaluhi led the receiving corps with three pass receptions for 106 yards and a touchdown.

The running game was geared by freshman Ronney Jenkins and McKenzie. Jenkins electrified the crowd with his speed and ability to explode around the corner of the defense. He carried the ball 5 times in the first-half for 35 yards and two touchdowns. McKenzie added a 17-yard scamper for a touchdown.

Edwards said the ability to run the ball was a big lift for the offense. "A couple weeks in a row now we've done a nice job of running the ball and that is obviously a big plus for us."

Despite a barnburner game and some tough Cougar defense, the women's volleyball team dropped two straight games to San Diego State and UC San Diego this past weekend.

Friday night was a night of comebacks for BYU, but the Cougars weren't quite able to comeback in the decisive fifth game of the WAC opener at San Diego State.

After the Aztecs won the first game, the Cougars showed some determination by rallying with a fierce comeback. Trailing 11-4, it looked like BYU would be down 2-0 in games, but with junior All-American Amy Steele serving and junior College transfer Rachel Greene having the game of her career, the Cougars came alive and closed the gap to 12-8.

The undefeated BYU women's soccer team of 9-0 didn't lose sight of their winning streak as they quickened up their step against the University of Creighton and came back with a 2-1 victory on Friday

The Creighton Lady Jays didn't give up the fight so easily against the Cougars. During the end of the first half, the Lady Jays scored first bringing the game to 0-1. This was the first time BYU had been scored on during the first half at a home

With the 1200 crowd of supporters, the Cougars came back at the half ready to play ball. Even though Shauna Rohbock has been feeling a little sick the past week, Rohbock secured both goals for the team after five minutes into the second half. One shot was unassisted and the second Jennifer Love assisted by bringing the ball to the goal keeper, causing a deflection of the ball and allowing Rohbock to place it in for the winning goal.

"Jennifer took a shot at the goal and the ball bounced off the keeper, so I had to tap it in," Shauna Rohbock said. "Creighton is the best team we've played offensively as well as defensively. It was the fastest paced game we've played all year," Rohbock added.

Head coach Jennifer Rockwood said the team played well the first half of the game, but the luck wasn't on BYU's side. "I'm really pleased with their performance. Our defense was outstanding. Emily Lubeck, Kathryn Creer, Shannon Kimball, Laurel Simpson and Melissa Robbins did a great job

Physical Soccer Cats bully weekend opponents

By BRANDON J. WIGHT Universe Sports Writer

Intensity, aggressiveness and physical stamina was the winning combination for the men's soccer team as it won all three home games this past weekend and improved its record to

The Cougars came out strong and physical in each match, frustrating quality opponents such as Kansas, Air Force and Northern Arizona.

The Thursday night game kicked off with the visiting Jayhawks. The Cougars, who started out slow with few goal attempts, finally maneuvered the ball into the Jayhawks' net well into the first-half.

The pace then picked up as the Cougars got more aggressive with goal attempts. BYU scored shortly after the first goal with honors going to Brad Peterson and an assist from Jon Lovell.

BYU then found its momentum and easily managed to score the third and fourth goals of the game. Jeremy Bailey scored off an assist from Jeremy Humpherys, extending a comfortable lead to 4-0. David Vassilaros then iced the game by scoring the final goal to end the game 5-1.

In the second game on Friday, Air Force came out strong, drilling BYU goalie Brian Jolley with goal attempts. However, the seasoned goalie made diving saves and blocks to keep Air Force scoreless throughout the game.

soccer, Humpherys scored off a crossfield assist by Brent Kearney.

Just before halftime, an aggressive Lovell stole the ball off a pass to the Air Force goalie and made the score 2-0 at halftime.

BYU picked up where it left off in the first-half and spent the rest of the game on the Falcons' side of the field. Bailey added another goal to make the final score 3-0.

Air Force frequently showed its frustration of the forceful Cougars. Late in the second-half, a Falcon player realized the only way to score on Jolley was to pick up the ball and throw it into the net. The Air Force coach also showed his frustration, consistently complaining about the Cougars' aggressiveness and "dirty" playing style.

"I wouldn't change our style of play one bit," BYU coach Chris Watkins said. "I like our style and to me it's clean. We were physically a bigger team than Air Force, which was a big advantage for us. As for being physical, this is our plan all year.

Lovell, who scored a goal for the Cougars, felt it wasn't the aggressiveness that allowed BYU to win, but the mistakes made by Air Force. "Air Force is a good disciplined team. However, the Falcons are a young team and we were fortunate to capitalize on their mistakes," he said.

ougar defense devastates SMU

IYU football team is not known for its ive prowess. When people think of football, they think of high-scoring decided in the last minute by a long wn pass. are a number of reasons for this differhasn't been a lack of competition is already faced some of its biggest chalof the year in Washington and Texas Experience has been a major factor thus defense's success.

defensive starters are back from last ateam — defensive linemen Henry field and Ed Kehl, linebackers Brad Dennis Simmons and Shay Muirbrook, ensive backs Tim McTyer and Eddie also successfully recruited a couple of defensive backs that have arguably made the Cougars the good defensive team that they now are. Cornerback Omarr Morgan and safety Chris Ellison both transferred to BYU from El Camino Junior College, and have both made a considerable impact on the team.

Morgan doesn't like to acknowledge that he and the rest of the defensive secondary are the reason for the Cougars' success.

"Our linebackers are just playing awesome. They're getting some good blitzes and when they're blitzing like that ... quarterbacks can't do anything," Morgan said. "We're just out there having fun. Me and Tim (fellow cornerback McTyer) are just back there kind of bored. They're getting all the action."

Morgan wasn't referring to other games—just the SMU game. However, what he said holds true. If the front seven can contain the quarterback and dominate the line of scrimmage, the secondary tends to get bored. This was true of Saturday's game.

"It was great, especially the linebackers. The defensive line got pressure on Ramon Flanigan. He was just throwing the ball up," Morgan said. A couple of times he got loose, but they didn't convert it into any points so it didn't really mat-

Flanigan had entered the game averaging almost 33 rushing yards a contest. BYU held him to 16 net yards on 17 carries. After a slow start for the defense, they settled in and shut the SMU offense down.

"I think once we got down into the red zone

we dug in and that definitely set the tone, but at first we were lethargic out there and not really getting to where we needed to be," Muirbrook said.

BYU has done that through the first five games of the 1996 season — shut down its opponent when it really counts. SMU twice had the ball near the BYU goal line with a first and goal situation, and only one field goal came out of it.

The Cougar defense has also allowed only three total points in the fourth quarter through the first five games.

SMU was not totally prepared for BYU's defensive scheme, and Flanigan took most of the punishment. He was sacked six times on Saturday and was forced to scramble most of the day to escape BYU's blitzing front seven.

"I was proud of the way Ramon kept getting up, because they hit him hard. We didn't block for him too well today," SMU head coach Tom Rossley said. "They played more man coverage than they did before, and they played a little bit different than they had shown."

This hard-hitting, aggressive, unpredictable defensive style gave SMU, and especially quarterback Flanigan, a headache all day Saturday. SMU has played both Utah and BYU now, and Rossley had something to say in comparison of the two.

"I would not mind playing Utah again, but I would not want to play BYU again this year," Rossley said.

With a 28-point cushion to start the second-half, BYU focused on running the ball, which they did 26 times for 98 yards, while attempting only 13 passes for 103 yards. Edwards said the offense was able to move the ball, but some mistakes prevented them from scoring in the second-half.

"Penalties took us out of some opportunities in the second half, he said. "It's not a matter of maintaining possession, it's a matter of getting the ball into the end zone and not getting it called back."

Overall, Edwards said he was happy with the effort his team put forth on the field

SMU head coach Tom Rossley said he was impressed by BYU, but disappointed his team was unable to execute and score when it should have. "They are strong. They beat us in all phases, and all I can say is that they are a good football team and they outplayed us all day long," he said.

To me they are the best team in the WAC. We just did about everything wrong that you can do — and you just can't do that against BYU."

Student rates available.

For the game, BYU rushed for 170 yards and three touchdowns on 42 carries, and passed for 375 yards and a touchdown on 24 completions in 31 attempts. The leading rusher was Jenkins with 75 yards on 10 carries.

The leading receivers were Kealaluhi with 111 yards on 4 receptions, and tight end Itula Mili with 6 receptions for 88 yards, his 22nd consecutive game with a catch. Chad Lewis contributed with 4 catches for 49 yards while his wife was in labor with their first child.

Sarkisian ended with 358 yards on 23 of 30 passing.

The defense was led by Muirbrook, fellow linebacker Brad Martin and defensive tackle Henry Bloomfield. Muirbrook led the team with seven tackles, including two for a loss. Martin added four tackles — two for a loss — and Bloomfield had five tackles and two quarterback hurries.

With the win, BYU improved its record to 4-1 overall and 2-0 in the WAC's Mountain Division. SMU now stands with a 2-3 overall record, 1-2 in the WAC

Rep. Greene campaigns for grand jury reform

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY - After testifying three times before a grand jury investigating financial scandals surrounding her, Rep. Enid Greene wants to reform those federal proceedings.

Greene, R-Utah, has introduced legislation to allow an attorney to accompany and advise a grand jury witness. The bill would not permit the lawyer to raise objections or disrupt the proceedings.

"My bill will help cooperating citizens feel confidence in our legal system and ensure fairness when prosecutors are questioning witnesses who would otherwise be intimidated by this one-sided process," she said in a prepared statement.

The congresswoman acknowledged through a spokesman that her interest in pushing reform legislation stemmed from her personal experience, although she did not criticize the grand jury before which she appeared.

"Her experience with the justice system over the past year has given her a perspective on the system, beyond her background as an attorney, on how it negates all the elements of a right to counsel,' said spokesman Michael Levy.

Greene spent three days answering questions in secret before a grand jury in Washington, D.C., last December and January. Under federal law, her attorney was barred from accompanying her, although he could provide counsel during recesses Greene's father, D. Forrest Greene, and ex-husband, Joe Waldholtz, along with various former campaign staffers, also were called as witnesses in the probe.

Waldholtz earlier this year pleaded guilty to four counts involving a $3 million check-kiting scheme and $2 million infusion of illegal funds into Greene's 1994 cam-

Greene, who has maintained her innocence throughout, has not been charged with any crime.

Levy said Greene deliberately waited until Congress was near adjournment for the year to file the measure. She is stepping down after this term.

"She didn't want people to think she was trying to help herself (in her own grand jury situation). But she has laid the groundwork for others to go forward with the changes next year," Levy said.

House Judiciary Chairman Henry Hyde, R-III., has agreed to bring the measure out for hearings next

BOOKS OF THE WEEK

Schedule inhibits Clinton in debate preparation Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A three-day escape from White House pressures and a three-ringed binder crammed with notes are key ingredients in President Clinton's preparations for Sunday's leadoff debate with Bob Dole.

Already, though, Clinton's plans have been thrown off by the worst violence between Palestinians and Israelis since the 1967 Mideast war.

The president was to have had a light schedule this week, with Sunday and Monday off, to allow time for debate study. That changed, though, when Clinton invited Mideast leaders to an emergency White House meeting on Tuesday to try to restore peace.

"The president has to order his priorities as he sees fit and this is his priority, right now," presidential spokesman Mike McCurry said.

Even so, Clinton is expected to go into seclusion Thursday through Saturday at the Lake Chautauqua Institute in New York to cram and practice for the first 90-minute debate, beginning at 9 p.m. EDT in Hartford, Conn., on Sunday, according to his campaign.

"It's important to get his head into this and that he's not tired," a senior adviser said. "It's important that we get him down."

After some last-minute squabbles over the debate format, an agreement was signed Saturday locking in the details of two presidential debates - Oct. 6 and Oct. 16 - and one vice presidential debate, Oct. 9.

Dole, the Republican nominee, already has spent several days this past week preparing at his seaside condominium at Bal Harbour, Fla. His schedule calls for him to return there for three days this week for the final polish on what the campaign hopes will be a breakthrough debate performance.

"The debates are very important. It's the one opportunity that a lot of people have to listen to both candidates," Dole said Saturday.

Historically, debates have been important in some - but not all - elections. In 1960, they provided a defining advantage for John F. Kennedy over Richard M. Nixon. In 1976, Gerald Ford's pardoning of Nixon and his debate gaffe about Soviet domination of Poland gave an edge to Jimmy Carter.

If nothing else, debates give candidates their largest television audiences of the campaign season, up to 100 million viewers, and help voters make closure about their choice for the White House.

"If you look over the elections of the voters make a final, last definitive decision about whom they're going to vote for. And their final choice tends to be the same choices they had made by Labor Day."

In 1992, Clinton went off the campaign trail, rested, studied and turned in a stronger performance than his main rival, George Bush. In one debate, Bush was seen on television glancing at his watch, as if in a

'No, we're not playing the expectations game," Dole campaign manager Scott Reed insisted Sunday on CNN's "Inside Politics." But then he added, "We all know Bill Clinton's a great debater. He's capable of charming the birds out of the trees every day."

Y student takes cancer funding plea to Congress Planners rethink feasibil

By JERRY M. GOWEN Universe Staff Writer

A BYU student shared the spotlight Thursday with Persian Gulf General Norman Schwarzkopf and baseball legend Rod Carew, highlighting a special session of the U.S. Senate assembled to discuss funding for disease

Zenia Bringhurst, a senior from Beaverton, Ore. majoring in chemistry, was invited by Sen. Mark Hatfield (R-Ore.) to address a special joint hearing of the Senate Appropriations Committee and Committee on Aging held on Sept. 26, 1996 because of her involvement with cancer research.

"They invited me to come back there and testify before the United States Senate. I guess the reason why it was such a big thing is because General Norman Schwarzkopf was there and Rod Carew, the former baseball player, and also the President of the Parkinson's Disease Association," said Bringhurst.

Bringhurst said she was involved with the Miss Oregon contest this summer and contestants had to choose a platform or issue they believed to be critical and wanted to do something about. Bringhurst chose increasing the funding for cancer research as her

"As a senior in high school my cousin became diagnosed with cancer and I really wanted to do research, so I started working in the pathology lab at St. Vincent Hospital in Oregon trying to understand what cancer was. I was examining tumors and things like that," Bringhurst said.

Bringhurst said she came to BYU and as a freshman started working with Dr. James Thorne, a BYU professor in the chemistry department. Bringhurst said he was doing cancer research dealing with photodynamic

"Because my platform was increasing the funding for cancer research, Sen. Hatfield, who is a strong advocate for medical research, invited me to speak back in Washington," Bringhurst said.

Bringhurst said she spent the past year conversing with staff at Sen. Hatfield's office on the issue of cančer research.

Bringhurst started a program a year ago called "CURE," which stands for Cancer Understanding through

"They wanted me to testify before a hearing a year ago. Sen. Hatfield issued a floor statement a year ago stating that 'We need to make sure that funds are available for people like Zenia who want to pursue research in the future," Bringhurst said.

According to Bringhurst, Sen. Hatfield submitted a proposal with Sen. Harkin (D-Iowa), called the Trust Fund Proposal, which would increase the tobacco tax one cent and put all the money towards research.

Bringhurst said over the summer an article was written about her in the Oregonian, Oregon's state newspaper, called "Beauty with a Cause," because she was involved with Miss Oregon and had a real platform dedicated to cancer research

When asked about her experience at the capitol, Bringhurst called it an exciting adventure with many incredible moments.

"Thursday morning I was invited to a breakfast with the senators. It was only for the senators and General Schwarzkopf and physicians who were also invited as guest speakers for the hearing. I met General Schwarzkopf there and got to know Rod Carew as well so we could get acquainted before we had to sit there and actually deliver the speeches. That was fun. I really enjoyed that," Bringhurst said.

"General Schwarzkopf started out the meeting and I finished it up," Bringhurst said.

Bringhurst said she was surprised to be displayed as such an important guest among so many important peosaid General Bringhurst Schwarzkopf delivered a beautiful speech about the importance of

"Schwarzkopf was diagnosed with prostate cancer and survived. He's happy to say that he is now okay. He repeatedly used this war metaphor and said that we're facing a war against cancer. He said 'We need to do something about this war we're facing.' It was very affective," Bringhurst said.

After he spoke, Bringhurst said Rod Carew shared the most emotional experience. He showed a clip relating the experience he incurred with his daughter who had leukemia. Bringhurst said they were trying to get a bone marrow transplant for her.

"60,000 Americans donated their bone marrow for her, but none of them matched," Bringhurst said.

"He showed a video clip of his daughter suffering, and it was so sad. It was really touching showing the before and after. She had gone through chemo and she was so weak after," Bringhurst said.

Bringhurst said Carew came to the committee just to testify about his

After Carew's speech, Joan Samuelson, president of the Parkinson's Action Network spoke. Bringhurst said Samuelson has Parkinson's disease and spoke directly with senators.

According to Bringhurst, Samuelson told about her feelings. At the very end of her speech she told the senators they didn't owe her the cure for Parkinson's disease or anything because she had the disease, but rather because she has paid taxes. Bringhurst said Samuelson told the committee the money is needed right now to do more research.

'All the senators really got into this emotionally. They were really hearing these people," Bringhurst said.

Bringhurst said she told the committee she had performed research for four years. She posed three questions. The first question was "What has research done for us?" The second question was "Are we continuing to nurture current research investiga-

"I finished my speech leaving the final question open to be answered by the senators. 'As a future scientist am I assured that my future research endeavors will be supported?' I will leave this answer up to you today,"

In her speech Bringhurst shared with the senators the example of former BYU President Rex Lee.

"Rex Lee was the president when I came to BYU and I watched the president of my university battle cancer. Listening to him and Janet speak on numerous occasions, and after seeing the pain he was experiencing, I was touched. He was a role model for me," Bringhurst said.

Bringhurst said research has done so much already, but can still do so much

"Research helped him (President Lee) to live an additional 11 years. 11 years that he wouldn't have lived without research. We have found ANY SOLUTIONS? methods of controlling cancer so that it doesn't spread as much. Research extended his life, but unfortunately it couldn't save him," Bringhurst said.

'We're at the point where we need to focus on saving people. We need to find cures for diseases. We're almost at that point, but we need to continue to support and expand our research funds," Bringhurst said.

"Senator Bennett of Utah actually cried when he was talking about him. He spoke to the other senators and told them that this nation had lost a great man when Rex Lee passed away," Bringhurst said.

After the panel had finished addressing the senators, a panel of doctors addressed them, Bringhurst said.

"The most interesting thing about the whole trip was that I got to see not the hard exterior of these senators — I got to see the person. Some of them were telling about personal experiences and some of them cried. They got really emotional and I guess it's hard not to when you're talking about losing someone from disease or experiencing it yourself. I always thought government workers were these hard, strict people but they were actually so sweet," Bringhurst said.

"Based upon the senators that were there, it was unanimous. All of them wanted to increase research funding. They know how important it is so it's just a matter of them following through. I have a good feeling about this. I think they will," Bringhurst Bringhurst said she was there representing the future of research.

"Many senators said it was one of the most emotional and touching hearings they had ever attended. I was just honored to be there," Bringhurst
